REV. D. W. FISHER. teresting Notes About New Albany fanufactories and its People-Ob-ations About Yellow Feyer and the miles from Louisville. The population is variously estimated at from 18,000 to 22,000, probability altogether in favor of the smaller figure. It is like most of the cities and towns of Southern Indiana, quite an old place. Formerly, when the means of communication with Louisville were not so quick and easy, it carried on a much larger commercial business, and as a city it was far more of a place complete

MANUFACTORIES.

It has some important industries, there are two rolling mills, one of which, I believe, manufactures railroad iron. There is a very large woolen factory. A small shipyard has been started. There is also one immense glass factory, which however is soon to be removed in part or wholly to the neighborhood of Pitsburgh. The city made earnest efforts to retain it,—going even to the extent of exempting it from taxation, but the understanding is that the removal nevertheless will be made. The chief reason assigned is that in the new locality coal and sand will be nearer at hand and cheaper. Whether shipping facilities is a consideration I know not; but it would not be strange if they are, for New Albany is poorly supplied with these. She has only the river; a little branch of the Jeffersonville, Madison and Indianapolis railroad by which she is connected with Louisville and Jeffersonville; and the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago road which terminates at Michigan City in the northern part of the State, but which has not the advantage of identification with any of the great lines of the country. Upon another railroad a large amount of work was done and then it was ted out of a generous sympatry for the suffering it was noble. But I confess that I have been sorry to observe in some quarters an over-anxiety to let the world know what has been done, apparently with an eye to the business advantage which may be reaped by the debt of gratitude under which the South has thus been placed. It is a pity to bring a noble actinto contempt by causing it even to seem to be prompted by selfish motives. Louisville can afford to leave the South to perceive the kindness done, without constant allusions to the quarantine of St. Louis and Cincinnati and the panic into which a refugee stricken with the fever seemed ready to throw them. A little less boast fulness over contributions made would be well in many places.

fever has raged at a much more northern latitude than even Louisville. In 1618 a disease closely resembling it appeared a among the Indians of Massachusetts and continued to be severe for several seasons. In 1793 it raged with great virulence in Philadelphia and many parts of eastern Pennsylvania. The death rate in Philadelphia was almost as high as in Vicksburg and Memphis the present year. The disease also spread to New York and to Massachusetts. And as to elevation above the sea, the Maltarahuatt as it is called, which in all its leading features seems to be identical with yellow fever, has often been extremely latal on the table-land of Mexico which is 7200 to 7800 feet above the level sea. thich is 7200 to 7800 feet above the level which is 7200 to 1500 left about the subject is still shrouded in mystery. One coincidence is worthy of note. It has been of the Betall shrouded in mystery. One coincidence is worthy of note. It has been brought out by a Professor in one of the Colleges of Alabama. It is that wide may it not be inferred that perhaps the only thing which saved the North from the epidemic the present year was the few days of heavy freezing which occurred last winter? But for them Wheeling might be as much of a charnel house as Memphis.

HOW THE SOUTH FEELS. MADISON, IND., September 24, 1878.

I spent a few days recontly at New Albany in this State. It is situated just below the falls of the Ohio and about four miles from Louisville. The population is best friends. a city it was far more of a place complete within itself. Since the Ohio has been for bridged and a railway has been built it has been one of the most extreme of Southern men in his become a sort of suburb of Louisville, especially as a place of residence for people who do their work over there. Several hundred persons are employed in Louisville but reside in New Albany.

MANUFACTORIES.

It has some important industries, there are two rolling mills, one of which, I believe, manufactures railroad iron. There is a very large woolen factory. A small shipyard has been started. There is also stamp do not sympathize with the foolish stamp do not sympathize with the foolish utterances of some local malignant. D. W. F.

Mines-Rich Leads of Silver and Gold. Silventon, Col., Sept. 18, 1878. Editors Intelligencer.

Do you wonder where this place is? I you look on the map you will find it in San Juan county. It is the famous San Juan mining country, and is situated among mountains, whose lofty heads pierce the clouds at heights ranging from 10,000 to 14,000 feet. The timber belt reaches up on the mountains as high as Indianapolis railroad by which she is connected with Louisville, New Albany and Chicago road which terminates at Michigan City in the northern part of the State, but which has not the advantage of identification with any of the great lines of the country. Upon another railroad a large amount of work was done and then it was abandoned.

THE PUTURE.

It is altogether probable that as a centre of business New Albany has seen its best days. But it is for that very reason rather the more delightful as a place of residence. Louisville, like Cincinnati, every year becomes more sooty and increases in is resemblance to Pittaburgh and Wheeling. In New Albany it is possible to escale the dirt and noise in a large degree. In fact no one who has not resided in them can appreciate the attractiveness of the smaller cities of this region of Indiana as homes. Flowers and fruits flourish wonderfully. Schools are abundant and of a very superior order, Indiana now has a permanent school fund of over $8000,000, the largest of any State in the Union. The people are lergely characterized by superior refinement. The one thing which repeis the average American is the want of life in matters of business.

New Albany has reason to be proud of the benefactions of some of her wealthy citizens. I wrote some months ago in regard to Mrs. Lansley, who at her death last apring left nearly her whole extate of about $200,000 to various benevolent objects. The Presbyterian Board of Toreign Missions will receive about $200,000. Among the living philanthropists of the place is my fortion of Martins Ferry. He is reported to be worth at least a million of dollars. He has at his own expense purchased a building for an old Lady's 100 the propose of the purchased a building for a condition of the propose of the purchased a building for a condition of the purchased a building for an old Lady's 100 the purchased a building for an old Lady's 100 the purchased a building for a condition of the propose of the purchased a building for an old Lady's 100 the pur 11.500 feet, and it is above the belt that the gold and silver lodes are found. By nu remember corectly, has more recently presented the Orphan Asylum with a suitable building. And now some of the people are agitating the subject of a hospital, which shall be free to all who are unable to pay for its care. If it is remembered that all these things are done by a little city, overshadowed by Louisville, and with the prospect before it only of a decrease of business, it speaks well for the generosity of some of its people. And yet in the indiscriminate cryagainst "bondholders," which is ringing through the land, these men and women, the prospect of which is ringing through the land, these men and women, the best of objects, are classed with the 'shoddyists' and with those whose sudden acquisition of wealth has served only to acquisition of wealth has served only to acquisition of wealth has served only to lift them up with pride and stimulate them to a heartless use of their passing day of power. This is a shame and a disgrace to the demagogues engaged in it.
